Painting by Vedder And Rare Sculpture For Museum of Art

Valuable Bequest Also Comes From Collection in Rome of W. H. Herriman, Which Includes Moreau's 'Edipus'

Two important recent accessions have come to the Metropolitan Museum of Art and are now on display for the first time. They are an early painting by Elihu Vedder called "The Lost Mind" and a rare Chinese wood sculpture of Buddhist deities from the "Ang" period. The Bequest Museum bulletin issued to-day, announces also a valuable bequest from the collection in Rome of William H. Herriman, consisting of paintings of varied character, the most notable of which is Gustave Moreau's "Edipus and the Sphinx."

The Vedder canvas was bequeathed by Mrs. Helen Lister Bullard, together with a Flemish picture of the "Adoration of the Magi" painted about 1550. The former was purchased from the artist in 1885 by Mrs. Laura Curtis Bullard, in whose memory her daughter-in-law has given it. It shows a girl in a dark robe wandering barefoot in a hilly, desert country. A blue-green cloak hangs from the head and a white scarf, knotted around the neck, flows in front. Vedder painted this picture soon after the outbreak of the Civil War in his garret quarters at 43 Beekman Street.

The Chinese carving is a museum purchase. It is one of the earlier examples of its type and apparently had lain underground for many years. Four female figures are represented, grouped back to back in standing posture, each with one hand upraised. The lines are simple and symmetrical, the whole shaped like a baluster or vase and having a hollow center. The original coloring, the object was probably used as a finial for a pagoda or shrine, according to Museum authorities, who place its origin within the seventh century.

Moreau's "Edipus" is a large painting representing a semi-nude male figure in the grasp of a sphinx with long, winding wings and the head of a beautiful woman. It was formerly exhibited in the Salon.

The Herriman bequest also includes a Flemish Madonna and Child subject painted by a follower of the Flemish school and a work by Gabriel Metsu, which shows a man lighting his pipe and a woman pouring him a drink. It is supposed to represent the artist and his wife. The latter picture is a painting on plaster showing the Madonna and Child is another of the Venetian school, of the sixteenth century. Still another painting is the "Italian Courtyard," by Desamps, of the French school.

Other new objects on view in the recent accession include a Roman vase by Wedgwood, which is the gift of the estate of Anna Moore Romaine; a fine French console table, and the following paintings: "Still Life," gift of the estate of the late Mrs. J. H. Jones; "The Death of the Virgin," by Robert Loftin Newman, gift of Mrs. Wallace Sawyer; "The Doll and the Monster," by Du Bois, gift of Mrs. Charles F. Whitney; "Snake Charmer," by Louis C. Tiffany, gift of Tiffany Foundation.

The museum also announces the receipt of $25,000, the bequest of Jacob H. Scheraga, of the late Mrs. J. H. Jones. The acceptance by the museum trustees of the Michael Dreier collection of paintings and other works of art is reported.

Finery of Centuries Ago Shown in Mosler Group

Beautiful American and French Costumes, Some From Pyle Collection, To Be Sold

The interesting collection of costumes and furniture, consisting of the studio effects of the American artist, Henry Mosler, which is assembled on exhibition at the American Art Galleries, is composed of authentic pieces of important historical character.

There are many specimens of the dress of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, of the type worn in America and France. Both dress and everyday attire are included, and the objects are of great beauty of design and workmanship.

There is a man's French embroidered velvet coat and breeches of the Louis XV. period. Embroidered in colored silks and pastels, with flowers, leaves and scrolls, the garment is strongly reminiscent of the elaborate costume of the period. The American cloth coat of blue, with buff lining, is a reproduction of the original.

An assemblage of furniture, peasant paraphernalia and other objects collected in Brittany while the artist was in France, there also is shown. The period of the Civil War is also represented with various relics and costumes. The properties will be sold for the estate by auction next Tuesday afternoon.

Dr. Lorenz Works On First Case of Infantile Paralysis

9-Year-Old Daughter of Dr. J. A. Hamilton Is Patient; City Prepares Hospitals for Series of Free Clinics

Isabel, the nine-year-old daughter of Dr. James A. Hamilton, Commissioner of Correction, was put on the operating table at St. Mark's Hospital, Second Avenue and Eleventh Street, at 10 o'clock yesterday afternoon. For more than an hour Dr. Adolf Lorenz twisted her legs as if they were putty, kneading and stretching the muscles with strong, confident fingers. He shortened the tendons of both legs and then put the child in a plaster of Paris cast. Last night she was resting comfortably and is expected to be discharged tomorrow.

Dr. Hamilton's daughter is a victim of infantile paralysis and she is the first patient of the kind to be operated on by Dr. Lorenz since he arrived here three weeks ago.

From St. Mark's Hospital Dr. Lorenz proceeded to the offices of Dr. Fred H. Drexler, 40 East Forty-first Street, and Dr. Dexter D. Ashley, 346 Lexington Avenue, where he held consultations.

In the evening he rested. He is now thoroughly resolved to remain in New York for the remainder of his stay. He carries on his work. His physical condition is run down, however, and he is being treated for stomach disorder.

Extensive plans are being made by the Health department to conduct the Austrian surgeon is to conduct under its auspices, beginning Wednesday.

The resources of every city hospital will be called upon to assist in the service of the patients examined or operated upon by Dr. Lorenz. Dr. H. G. Macdonald, chief of the Division of Institutional Inspection, said yesterday that it is making preparations for as many beds as may be necessary.

Dr. Jacob Sobel, assistant director of the Bureau of Child Hygiene, and Dr. F. B. Van Wart, orthopedic specialist of Kings County Hospital, viewed 14 crippled children at the Health Department yesterday and selected eleven for treatment by Dr. Lorenz next Wednesday morning.

Teapot Sells for $1,120 Historic Household Properties Offered at American Galleries

An early American silver teapot of exceptional quality and character yesterday brought $1,120 at the sale of historic household properties from several private collections which is being held at American Art Galleries, L. J. O'Reilly was the purchaser.

The session total was $4,924.50. The teapot was of pear-shaped body design, with domed lid and disk-shaped handle and foot. It was made of silver and engraved in a shield-shaped escutcheon.

The same buyer obtained a silver sugar caster, early American in design, being of cylindrical shape with scroll pierced lid and engraved "P. I. M." with the mark "H. M." in shield-shaped escutcheon. The high bid was $270. The sale total so far is $12,768.50.

Martin Treasures on Sale

The first session of the sale of silverware from the collection of the Mrs. Bradley Martin, and objects of belonging to Mrs. Barger Wallace brought yesterday afternoon at the Anderson Galleries.

A pair of silver-gilt statuettes in the form of a peasant boy and peasant girl, and another pair of similar figures, eighteenth century costume, were sold from the Martin collection to V. C. Brown for $105 each. Inscriptions on the bases state that these objects formed part of the property of the Earl of Beaconsfield. They were purchased at his sale in 1871.

A pair of Sheraton library globes on mahogany stands, made in England late in the eighteenth century, were sold to A. L. Harmon for $100.

Maine Society to Hold Annual Dinner at Delmonico's Dec. 15

The number of applications already received indicates that much interest is being shown by former Maine people in the annual dinner of the Maine Society of New York to be held at Delmonico's Thursday evening, December 15.

The speakers will include Senator William E. Borah, Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas, Charles M. Schwab and Augustus Thomas. Applications for reservations should be made to the Secretary, William L. Flye, Glen Ridge, N. J.

HARRY G. McDONALD

Harry G. McDonald, one of the nationally known figures in the order of the Knights of Columbus, and for the last twelve years assistant supreme secretary of the order, died at his home in New Haven, Conn., on Thursday, according to word received yesterday at the New York headquarters of the Knights of Columbus.

Mr. McDonald was thirty-six years old and his work as a knight was commended to the order by Supreme Secretary William J. McGinley. Mr. McDonald also was decorated by the French Academy for his war work during the war. He is survived by his wife and five children.

Arthur Pearson, Blind Publisher, Drowns in Bath

Noted British Newspaper and Magazine Owner, Stunned by Fall in Tub, Dies Before Discovered

Benefactor to Sightless Founded St. Dunstan's for Afflicted English Soldiers; Aided U. S. Vets

From The Tribune's European Bureau

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Sir Arthur Pearson, the blind leader of the blind who was knighted for his success in that difficult role, was stunned by a fall in his bathtub this morning and was drowned before help came.

From the time that blindness first threatened him more than seven years ago, he had trained himself to do without sight. He prided himself upon his complete mastery of the daily details of his life and suffered no one to help him. Consequently, it was by an accident to which a dependent blind man would be immune, though one which a normal man could not guard against, that Sir Arthur died, no one in his household making any inquiry for him until his prolonged absence caused alarm.

In his fall his head had struck a faucet and his scalp was cut, the severity of the injury leaving no doubt that he was rendered senseless immediately.

Career a Notable One

Sir Arthur Pearson's career was notable quite aside from the glory into which he transformed his affliction. He of his sight failed when he was forty-eight years of age, but his achievements, which few men attain in a lifetime and a fortune built up in the publishing business which he carried forthwith to the relief of the blind.

He was the son of the Rev. Arthur Cyril Pearson and was born in Woolly, near Wells, February 24, 1856. He had four brothers and three sisters. He was three years at Winchester College. His first job, which paid him $500 a year, he obtained in competition with 3,000 others, winning a prize which was $100.
